Atlantic Publishing. 1 Cloth(s), 2014. hard. Book Condition: New. A behind-the-scenes look at World War II and a tribute to the British people, this book documents life on the home front in London. These 350 captioned, black and white images from the archives of the Daily Mail depict civilian attempts to maintain a degree of normalcy, enduring nights sleeping in the metro and commuting on rubble-strewn streets. The substantial contributions of women are profiled here, as are the war industry and the mass exodus of families to the safety of the countryside. The extensive damage done to the city by German air raids is also thoroughly covered, underscoring the severity of the situation. 160.
