Thomas, Jr., Of Maryland, on Reconstruction: Delivered in the House of Representatives, April 21, 1866 The House, as in Committee of the Whole on the state of tho Union, having under consideration the President s annual message - Mr. J. L.Thomas said: Mr. Speaker: The great question of reconstruction and the collateral issues properly belonging to it have been agitating this country in some form or another since the first session of the Thirty-Eighth Congress. The rebellion which has been so gloriously crushed out has devolved upon us the solemn duty of dealing with its results in such a manner as that a permanent peace shall be secured and a lasting adjustment of all the irritating causes that produced it, shall be forever put at rest. I, for one, have made up my mind what course I shall pursue, and with malice toward none, with charity for all, with determination to do the right as God giveth me to see the right - to advocate and support such principles as will reconstruct the States lately in rebellion on a sure and loyal foundation, and that treason will never again lift its bloody hand to strike down the bulwarks of the Constitution. Differences have arisen among us as to how this can best be done. Loyal, patriotic, honest men have spoken on the subject, and while some of them differ as to the details, and others as to mere abstract questions and theoretic views of State suicide, we all agree on one point, and that is, that no rebellious State shall be represented on this floor until her people show such...
