Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Letter of James Garland, to His Constituents The number of subordinate officers at the discretion of the four principals. - This will be the beginning, but what will be the end none can with certainty predict; but judging of the future by the past, I augur nothing preservative of our free institutions, or beneficial to the people. I have no doubt there will be a rapid accumulation of both. In the address of the republican members of the Legislature of Virginia, which accompanied the immortal report of 1798. It is said: If measures can mould Governments, and if an uncontrolled power of construction, is surrendered to those who administer them, their progress may be easily foreseen, and their end easily foretold. A lover of monarchy, who opens the treasures of corruption, by distributing emolument among devoted partisans, may at the same time be approaching his object, and deluding the people with professions of republicanism. He may confound monarchy and republicanism by the art of definition. He may varnish over the dexterity which ambition never fails to display, with the pliancy, of language, the seduction of expediency, or the prejudices of the times. And he may come at length to avow, that so extensive a territory as that of the United States, can only be governed by the energies of monarchy; that it cannot be defended except by standing armies; and that it cannot be united, except by consolidation. The measures of the Administration of John Adams, which tended to these ends, and which aroused the jealous enthusiasm of the republicans of that day, to determined and vigorous resistance, consisted, as they stated, In fiscal systems...
